30 to 45 minute increments work best unless a longer lesson has been prepared with students. Having a sense of the number of students in the class is helpful so the materials can be ready. We recognize schedules need to be flexible, but preparing this information helps both students and COGA staff have a sense of how the day will work. Eight sessions a day is usually the most that can be fit in, although sometimes an additional section can be completed over lunch. Starting the sessions a few minutes after school begins and ending them a few minutes before school lets out usually works best.
